DREADFUL CATASTROPHE

One of these awful visitations that seem to set at defiance all the calculations of hunan prodence, occurred in this city on Friday night. The story is one of such heart rending wos, such appalling misery, an to render most difficult the task of recording the borrible details. The alarm of fire was first made about helf past 11 o'clock; the first notice apprared to be given to the public by Mr. Oxley, at whose premises, in Wine street, it There were in the house Mr. and Mrs. Oxley, an infant six weeks old, and a child about seven years, who were sleeping in the front room on the flest floor; the shop girl and a child about four years old in the attic, and the servant maid with two others in the garret. The fire originated in the bed room on the first floor. It appears that a candle or rush-light was kent constantly burning, and was necessarily near the bed. Mrs. Oxley had awoke with the intenti on of suckling her infant, and while the child was at the breast she lell George Howard, of Brice, deceased asleep. It is feared that in moving the bed clothes she must have put them in contact with the candle. Mr. Oxley was awoke by a sensa tion of apparent suffocation, and found the bed in flames, and the purchase room filled to the most sufficating degree with smoke! He first atte upted to extinguish the flames, but without effect; and his face hi hands, and arms, were dreadfully huent. He then tried to rouse he wife, but if sie was awake she mus have fainted instantly.

Finding be could not rouse her. and losing his presence of mind from excess of pain, agitation, and suffocation. he ran down stairs naked as he was, and rushed into the street crying out for assistance. The flames in the windows had, by this time, collected some half dozen persons in front of the house; in reply to their questions, the un happy husband and father could only exclaim, "Oh! for God's sake, only exclaim, "Oh! for God's sake, not of ground lying and being in the there are three at the top of the house!" He attempted to rush back into the house; but the moment he opened the door, the narrow stairwhole premises in one blaze of li-quid fire; the burning clement pouring out of every window reach-ing helf second the said property to the highest bidder, for cash, to satisfy the debt due as afore-said. Safe to commerce the said ing half across the street. Jus previous to this moment the attic window was observed to open, and a young woman with an infant, four years old, both in a state of nudity, presented themselves to the cias issued out of Anne-Arunder coun view of the crowd, which was be ty court and to me directed against the goods and chattels. lands and te ginning to collect. They begged her to remain a few minutes till a nements, of James M'Cudoch, at sui of John J. Douslison and Ann Somer ladder was brought; but so rapidly were the flames gaining on her, that in her despair she threw the ville, I have seized and taken in exe that in her despair she threw the child out; it fell on the lead that projects from under the drawing room window; a man righed across the atrect to catch it; his arm broke the fall, but it rebou del to the Choice, Scorto pavement. It was taken up bruisfour hundred ed, but not so severely as might be land, more ed, but not so severely as might be 23d day expected; it will recover. In a moment after the child reached the said prop ground, the young woman was seen may be to throw herself from the window; claim, t she also fell upon the leads, and to sat she was then caught by the people Sale to below; she is much bruised and cut l out the head and legs; but she is doing well. The secont girl had escaped out of the back garret window, through Mr. Batten's house. The subscriber having obtained from the Orphans' Court of Anne Ataking with her one of the children The remaining three children, with the unfortunate mother, fell victims to the devouring element.
